1. Former Army officers and recent deserters from the Militia are said to be directing resistance activity in the Carpathian Mountains, the Dobruja, the Galati area and the Banat. It is believed that these partisan groups have no organized command. Members of the group are recruited from all social classes and consequently are united only by a common hatred of the present Rumanian regime. Partisans apprehended by Rumanian authorities are executed without trial.
2. There is considerable dissatisfaction among the employees of the former Malaxa plant in Bucharest. Many workers have already left this factory to join these partisan bands.
3. Border areas thirty kilometers into the interior of Rumania are now restricted regions. Whenever residents enter or leave these areas they must carry special entry or exit permits; inhabitants of other parts of Rumania before entering or leaving a restricted area are required to register with the police. Rumanian citizens are otherwise free to travel throughout the country provided they report any permanent changes of residence to the police.
